Arraigned for alleged groping

BOSTON. A Brookline man was arraigned Friday for allegedly touching a 16-year-old boy's crotch while at a T stop after a Red Sox game the night before.

According to police reports, Scott P. Moore, 45, was arraigned in Roxbury District Court on charges of indecent assault and battery after he allegedly groped the teen at Kenmore station.

He was released on personal recognizance. METRO

Man killed in the South End

BOSTON. A man in his 30s was found shot to death in the South End on Saturday.

According to reports, at 4:51 a.m. police responded to East Berkeley Street and Harrison Avenue where they found a man with a gunshot wound. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Police are asking for people with information to contact the CrimeStoppers Tip Line at 1(800) 494-TIPS or text 'TIP' to CRIME (27463). METRO

Dozens of ballot initiatives filed with attorney general's office Voters could be asked to support assisted suicide, casinos, medical marijuana

Massachusetts could see some serious changes if several petitioned ballot initiatives make their way to voters in 2012.

Two of the more prominent law-hopefuls could turn the Bay State into a gambling hot spot with three in-state casinos and also make it home to legalized medical marijuana.

Others would legalize assisted suicide or allow shoppers to purchase wine at supermarkets, provided petitioners jump certain hurdles by a November deadline, and garner enough voter support.

"Thirty-four other states already allow it," said Cynthia Eid, consultant for a group pushing for beer and wine sales in supermarkets. "The grocery stores have found that their customers like the convenience of one-stop shopping."

But Dan Kennedy, Northeastern University journalism professor and political and media blogger, said previous similar measures have been defeated because package store owners and police raised fears that passage would make it easier for minors to buy alcohol.

"We found in general that the public is far ahead of the Legislature on this."

MORGAN FOX, OF THE MARIJUANA POLICY PROJECT

Kennedy said there are obstacles ahead before any questions hit the ballot — the attorney general's office must first approve the initiatives, then supporters would need to collect 69,000 signatures from registered voters.

Morgan Fox of the Marijuana Policy Project said when making the medical marijuana decision, voters may look at how recent decriminalization of small amounts of the drug "wasn't a disaster."

As for casinos, Kennedy said polls show that voters favor casinos in general but oppose them if there is an attempt to get them built in their backyards.

Two dead in Rozzie shooting

Two people were killed and a third injured during an early morning shooting in Roslindale Sunday.

Police said a 17-year-old man and a 43-year-old woman died after being shot in a building on Washington Street, near the Forest Hills MBTA stop.

A third victim, who police identified as a 34-year-old man, remains in the hospital with non-life threatening injuries.

Police received calls about shots fired around 3:45 a.m. When they arrived at 3964 Washington St., they discovered the three victims. METRO

Urban Festival leads to large crowd, assaults

50K gathered at City Hall Plaza Performer says 'riots' broke out MBTA is investigating assaults

YOUTUBE.COM

This teen crowd surfing was one of the tamer moments of the show, concert-goers said.

Close to 50,000 people gathered at City Hall Plaza Saturday to see rap artist Mac Miller perform at the annual Urban Music Festival, which prompted "riots," according to the rapper's Twitter page.

Miller's music is known for lyrics about smoking marijuana and wearing Nike shoes, a contrast to Mayor Thomas Menino's recent conflict with NikeTown to remove a T-shirt display that allegedly promoted drug use.

"Was that real?"

A TWEET FROM RAPPER MAC MILLER, FOLLOWING SATURDAY'S INCIDENTS

Since 2004, the free Urban Music Festival, sponsored by Menino, was used as an attempt to promote peace and was called "Peace Hip-Hop Festival."

This year, a spokesperson in the arts, tourism and special events department in the mayor's office told the Globe they changed the name to reach a wider audience.

She also said the venue was family-friendly and "for self-expression in a safe and controlled environment."

According to Miller's tweets following the show, fans began rioting in the streets.

A Boston Police spokesman said increased police presence was needed in the Downtown Crossing area due to the large crowd, but said no actual rioting occurred.

Police did say, however, that someone reported being robbed after the show.

A spokesman from the MBTA said detectives are investigating various assaults that occurred at T stations, because of "large groups of disorderly youths on the subway and commuter rail systems."

Other tweeters reported fights near City Hall and several videos, now removed from YouTube, showed fans throwing punches in broad daylight.

No arrests were reported at the concert, a police spokesman said, but an announcer had to interrupt the show to ask concert-goers to stop throwing bottles at one another and "stop being disrespectful."

1-in-3 odds that AA rating falls

S&P managing director says US could see further credit downgrade ‘Stabilization’ needed to recover

Standard & Poor's managing director John Chambers said yesterday there is a one in three chance of a further U.S. credit rating downgrade over the next six months to two years.

"We have a negative outlook ... from six months to 24 months," he said on ABC's "This Week."

"And if the fiscal position of the United States deteriorates further, or if the political gridlock becomes more entrenched, then that could lead to a downgrade. The outlook indicates at least a one in three chance of a downgrade over that period."

Chambers said that it would take some time for the United States to recover its AAA rating.

"It would take a stabilization of the debt as a share of the economy and eventual decline. And it would take, I think, more ability to reach consensus in Washington than what we're observing now," he said. REUTERS

She's having a ball

EUGENE GOLOGURSKY/GETTY IMAGES FOR GREY GOOSE

▶ Sarandon showed off her skills on Friday while in East Hampton.

Susan Sarandon's love of all things pingpong is well-documented (she's an investor at SPiN, a pingpong parlor located in New York's Flatiron district). But she still claims she's an average player and not cutthroat at all — a fact that really hit home during a recent trip to China.

"Not at all," she said when asked if she were a competitive player. "I just played recently in China, and it was the most traumatizing thing. First of all, I had no idea what was going on. Second of all, I'm not competitive. I'm shy."

Is it pingpong that keeps the svelte 64-year-old in such great shape? Maybe! "It's really good exercise, it's great for the brain, it relieves stress," she told Metro on Friday while at an event with Grey Goose and SPiN in East Hampton. "They've been doing tests on Alzheimer's and really recommend [that patients] practice to work on right brain/left brain coordination."

Now if only we city-dwellers had enough room for a pingpong table ...

The J. Lo divorce is getting ugly

The "amicable" part of Jennifer Lopez and Marc Anthony's split is apparently done, as the inevitable custody battle has reportedly gotten under way with Lopez looking for sole custody of their twins, according to Us Weekly. "They are always with their mom. Jennifer lights up around her kids. She's incredible, balancing work and being a good mom," a source says.

Well, here's something that is going to make you feel old: The top actresses ranked by their Klout score (a measure of how much online influence people have) are Demi Lovato, Selena Gomez, Ariana Grande, Miley Cyrus and Bella Thorne. As the Huffington Post points out, the average age of these tweeters is a ripe 17. The HuffPo then had Ad.ly, a company that pays celebrities to tweet on behalf of brands, compile a second list of the most influential tweeters when it comes to people buying what they mention. The winner? Lindsay Lohan.

Lohan, an actress who is less successful than Tara Reid in landing a movie gig. And there you have it: The world really is a vampire.

George Clooney is reportedly rebounding from Elisabetta Canalis with ex-wrestler Stacy Keibler, according to Us Weekly. "It's more than just a fling," a source says of the pair, who have known each other for about four years. "They're basically exclusive at this point. They like each other's sense of humor. Obviously they're both physically attracted to one another." But the new couple apparently plans to keep things private when it comes to their relationship: "I don't see her hitting any of the red carpets with him," the source adds.

Jolie is 'bored' with England

Angelina Jolie is reportedly so bored in England while Brad Pitt films "World War Z" that she's considering packing up the kids and heading back to the U.S. before he's finished, according to Us Weekly. "She's not pleased being at home while he's on set," the source says. "These are the longest hours he's spent on a set in a while, so it's just her and the kids with not much to do." While Jolie has been giving life in London a go, including taking son Maddox and her older children to see "Wicked" over the weekend for his birthday, it's unclear how much longer she'll be interested in sticking around.

Winehouse home to be rehab center

Amy Winehouse's family is reportedly planning to turn her $4 million north London home into a rehab center and the offices of the Amy Winehouse Foundation, according to the Sun. "They don't want to rent it out, and if they sold it they think it could attract the wrong kind of buyer as it was where Amy passed away," a source says. "Everyone is united in making it a success — the label, her family, friends and management. [Her father] Mitch has big plans and needs a nice environment where employees will be able to carry out their work properly."

It's a dog's life for Rolling Stone contest winners

Previously unsigned band out of Canada win record deal and cover story from the legendary rock magazine

You may not have heard of the four burly, hirsute men from Saskatchewan called The Sheepdogs, but after winning Rolling Stone magazine's first "Do You Wanna Be a Rock & Roll Star?" contest, they just became the first unsigned band to ever land a cover story in the magazine. Also part of their prize: a recording contract with Atlantic Records.

Since their fan-voted victory, which came after a performance at Bonnaroo Music Festival in June, the bluesy rock group with a '70s vibe has sped up to live life in the fast lane.

"I'm not really sure how much sleep I got last night because I can't remember when I went to bed," says drummer Sam Corbett. "Then we got up and we had to go to 'Jimmy Fallon' — we woke up like literally 10 minutes before we had to go down there."

The band came together in 2005, sharing a love for Kings of Leon. And now, despite the recent drama that forced the Kings to cancel their U.S. dates, The Sheepdogs are gearing up to tour Canada with them this fall.

"I know they've had issues before and it's not easy being in the spotlight," says guitarist Leot Hanson. "But in the end, you're brothers."

MEREDITH ENGEL
meredith.engel@metro.us

What's in a name?

How was the now-famous moniker developed?

"There's no real rhyme or reason," says Hanson. "People are like, 'Oh, you guys look like sheepdogs, you're all scruffy and hairy.' [But] it has nothing to do with that. Just a coincidence."

'Mad Men,' 'Modern Family' big winners at the TCA Awards

THE TELEVISION CRITICS ASSOCIATION PRESS TOUR, A MEETING OF JOURNALISTS AND NETWORKS TO PREVIEW NEW AND RETURNING SERIES, KICKED OFF IN LATE JULY. FOLLOW OUR COVERAGE ONLINE AT WWW.METRO.US/TV AND ON TWITTER: @AMBERATMETRO.

The Television Critics Association took time off from interviewing TV talent to honor them on Saturday night at the 27th annual TCA Awards, a ceremony recognizing achievement in the medium. "Friday Night Lights" took the top honor, named program of the year in its final season. The football drama had previously been recognized by the TCA as the outstanding new program of 2006. "Game of Thrones" won outstanding new program this season.

"Mad Men" swept its categories; the series was named best drama for a third year, while Jon Hamm took home the award for individual achievement in drama. "Modern Family" also dominated its category, earning its second straight award for best comedy, while star Ty Burrell was honored for individual achievement in comedy — an award he shared with "Parks and Recreation" star Nick Offerman, who also served as host of the TCA Awards ceremony.

Oprah Winfrey accepted the career achievement award via a taped speech, thanking TCA members for their honest criticism. Carl Reiner accepted the TCA Heritage Award, honoring programs that have a lasting impact on popular culture, on behalf of "The Dick Van Dyke Show."

Making the grade

It's easy to complain about MTV-era attention spans But despite popular opinion, one researcher says today's students are as engaged as ever

TRIMESTOCK

▶ If you guys text during a lecture, we're taking back all the nice things we just said.

It's likely that 2011's batch of freshmen will be greeted by some professors who have a pretty low opinion of today's students.

The common view is that students are much less prepared for college today, that standards are far lower and that freshmen have a shorter attention span each year.

Sound familiar?

But, according to Brent Bell, a researcher at the University of New Hampshire, students shouldn't take their professor's condemnations too seriously, because: Professors have almost always felt this way, and it simply isn't true.

Bell recently authored "What Do You Expect From Millennials?" in the Journal of College Orientation and Transition, in which he takes this prevailing view head-on. "My first year of teaching, I was shocked at how poorly my students were writing; but then I had the experience of finding my old papers from undergrad. I realized that I had improved dramatically over a period of time, but had remembered myself as a much better writer," he explains. "For teachers, it truly feels like the students are much less prepared. But I found that this sentiment was pretty consistent right back to the early 1900s."

Ultimately, after the initial typically rough first semester, Bell found that today's college students are doing about the same quality of work — and maybe even better — than their predecessors. "The best criticism of that is grade inflation — students aren't held to the same standards," he says. "But if you look at the SAT over the years, the scores have stayed pretty much the same — and that's with far more students taking the test."

Don't let your thumbs get in the way of a bright career Expert e-mail etiquette tips

In the age of automatic spell-check, it's tempting to thumb out double-time memos with no regard for the art of spelling. Still, career counselors warn, your lack of SMS manners could cost you. "People are losing the art of putting together a complete couple of sentences," says career coach Sue Thompson. "You need to consider to whom are you writing."

"It's all about building rapport," agrees Shirin Khamisa, founder of Careers By Design. If you receive snappish, unpunctuated replies — no "Hey, how are you?" "Nice to hear from you!" — then you might, she suggests, keep your correspondence curt. "But if it's a person who has a more personal touch, then I would reciprocate," she adds. "Those niceties are very important in building relationships, even online — and especially online — because we need that glue to hold us together."

Older workers, Thompson notes, can be made uncomfortable by an overload of Web 3.0 abbreviations. "Baby boomers are going to expect a fairly concise, but formal e-mail," she says. And they'll likely place a greater importance on spelling, she adds: "Some people will really consider your spelling, whether you know the difference between 'your' and 'you're.' Just respect the person to whom you're writing. That's what etiquette is."

DREW HINSHAW
letters@metro.us

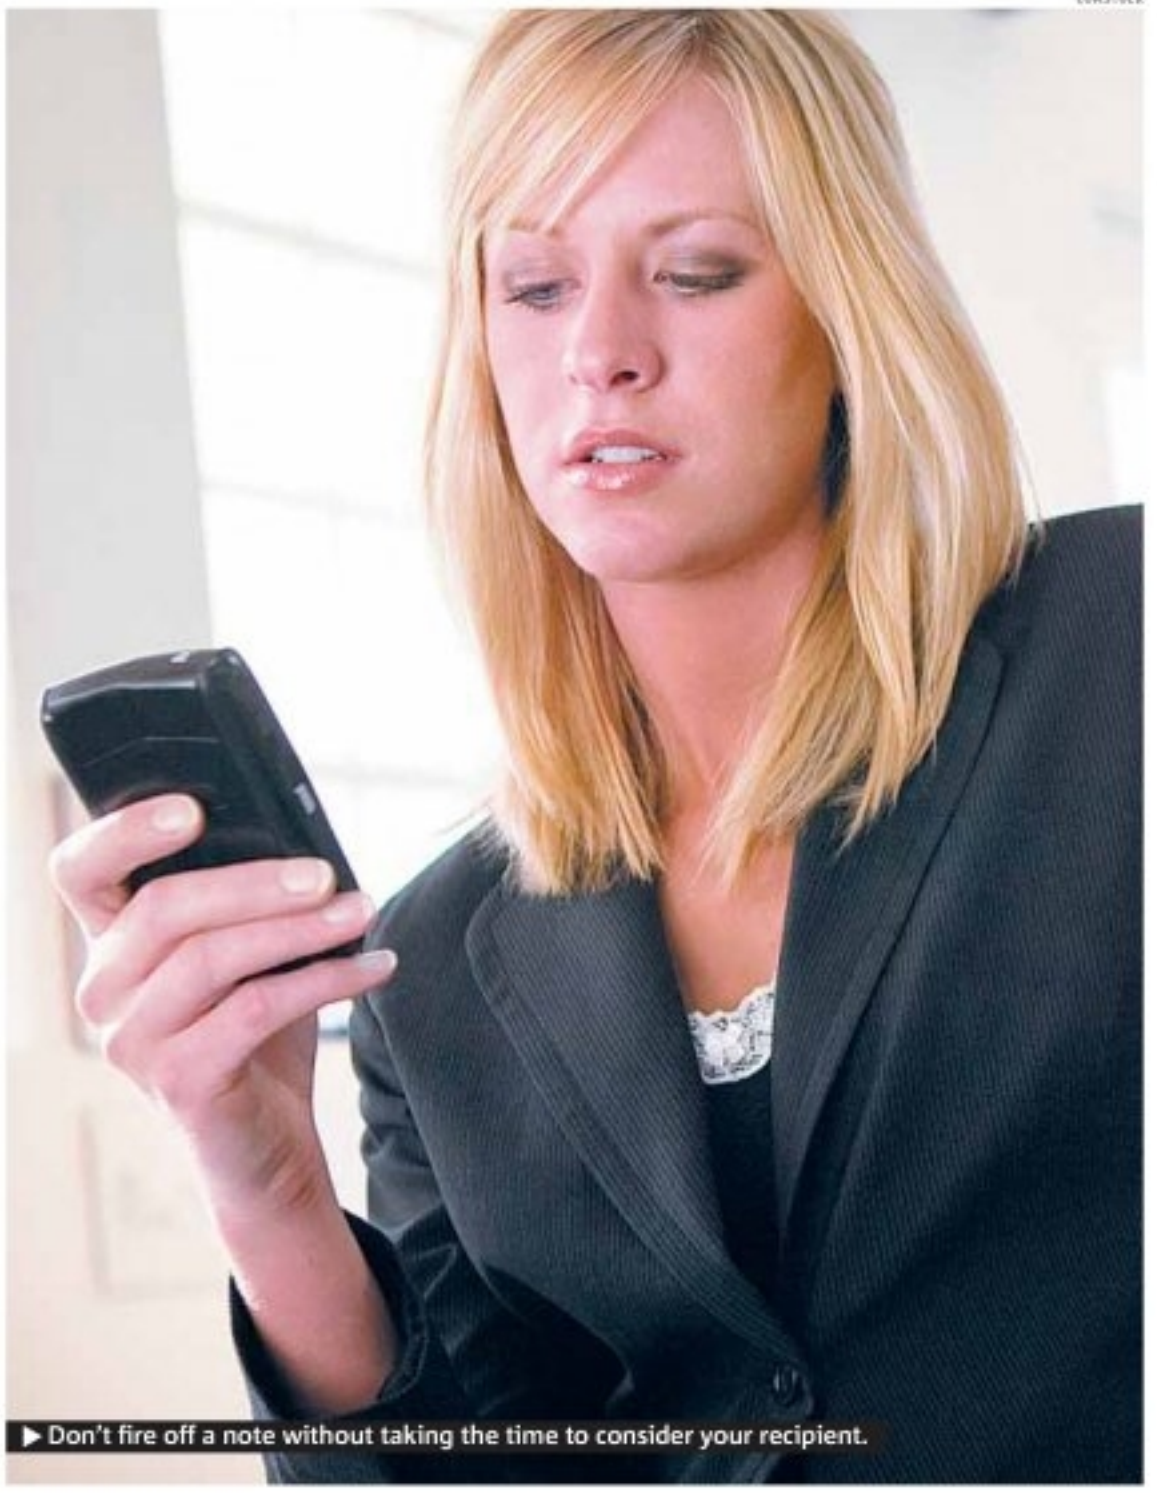
Get personal

If a picture's worth 1,000 words, then sending a low-resolution head shot can't hurt. "Attach a small photo in your signature," says Khamisa. "The next time you meet, you'll notice a difference in how you're received."

Keep it clear

Don't get so lost in digital decorum that you never get to the point, Khamisa cautions.

"Keep those in the top of the e-mail so they don't get lost," she advises. "Put them in the subject line. Present things the way you'd want them presented to you."



COMSTOCK

▶ Don't fire off a note without taking the time to consider your recipient.

Top jobs in two years or fewer

DIGITAL VISION

▶ Technicians and assistants are an increasingly large part of the expanding — and expensive — health care system.

A traditional four-year degree puts up some enticing numbers: According to statistics from the U.S. Department of Education, in 2008, young adults with bachelor's degrees were less likely to be unemployed than those with high school diplomas, while they earned 28 percent more than their peers with associate's degrees.

However, according to "Top 100 Careers Without a Four-Year Degree" co-author Laurence Shatkin — who, it should be noted, pursued a Ph.D. — there are still stable fields for those with less formal education and training.

Skilled labor

While some jobs will continue to be outsourced, others, by design, will have to stay right here in the U.S. "There is always going to be a need for skilled workers such as plumbers, electricians and construction workers. You can't ship these careers overseas," says Shatkin.

Health care

While he notes a four-year degree is still the preferred route for registered nurses, Shatkin identifies ultrasound technicians, medical office assistants and home health care aides as just a few of the positions that require less training and will be in demand.

"It's partly that the population is getting older, and partly that there's new technology and people who will be covered by that," he says. "In an attempt to reduce costs, there's been a shift in responsibilities to lower-paid workers."

Alternative energy

As "green" becomes mainstream, there will be a need for workers at every education level in alternative energy fields. "Every Wal-Mart that gets built now has a green roof," points out Shatkin, who predicts more opportunities in solar and wind power, hybrid cars and energy auditing.

Heed a call to disarm

Aug. 9 marks the commemoration of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Sixty-six years is enough! Keeping such weapons on high alert creates unacceptable risks. In this time of budget crisis, it is unthinkable that we continue to find funding for these weapons while cutting essential programs that support our nation. Desmond Tutu wrote: "Nuclear arms are wicked regardless of who possesses them. So long as these weapons exist, the threat of their use either by accident or through an act of sheer madness will remain." Eliminating all nuclear weapons is the best way to secure a safe and healthy future

MICHEL H NAZAIRE, VIA E-MAIL

Two's company, three's a crowd

Our founding fathers were against declaring political parties and receiving pay for public service. We made short work of such idealism. But we did agree on one thing concerning political parties: of all the options, the two-party system was the most efficient. The "Tea Party" label infers that it is a legitimate political party, which it is not. I suggest we rename the Tea Party the "Tea Baggers" since they seem to come to life in hot water. It's all in semantics.

KEN BONACCI, SALEM, MA.

RE: Goodbye & good riddance

I am a believer of small government, which is why I think that disqualifies me as a Democrat; I identify as an independent. The problem with Tea Partiers is that they do not believe in small government. They pick and choose when they want government to be small and when they want to control the lives and rights of the American people. For example: a woman and her vagina.

ALICIA PEREZ, BOSTON

A matter of priorities

A polar bear in Norway kills one British tourist and badly mauls four others; It is promptly killed. After the attack in an inaccessible area of the Arctic circle, a helicopter was sent immediately to reach the victims. Two weeks ago, one man murdered 77 people in Oslo, and he might get 21 years in prison. That's less than four months for each life that he took. It's a pity that the attacker in Oslo wasn't a polar bear!

Mallett poised to give Hoyer a run

With the preseason starting Thursday, we're looking at the prospects for every Patriots position ◐ Today, the QBs ◐ Next up, the RBs and WRs

There's obviously no debate over who will start at QB for the Patriots.

The backup? That's a different story this year.

Brian Hoyer has backed up Tom Brady two years running, and — luckily — he hasn't played much. Hoyer has completed just 26 passes for 264 yards and one touchdown.

New England landed Hoyer as an unheralded, undrafted free agent out of Michigan State.

This year, he's got competition — and it's anything but unheralded and undrafted.

Ryan Mallett, the Pats' third-round pick in the 2011 draft, started his collegiate career at Michigan, but transferred to Arkansas after his freshman campaign.

After sitting out a season due to NCAA transfer rules, he posted a stellar sophomore season. The success carried over to his junior year, which carried over to him declaring for the draft.

Despite his first-round talent, reported "character issues" dropped Mallett to the third — where Bill Belichick was only too happy to snatch him up.

After investing the pick, the Pats seem likely to go into the season with three QBs on the roster.

Given the short offseason, expect Hoyer to get the nod behind Brady ... at first. Mallett has looked very impressive in camp.

Patriots sign Jets DE Ellis

The Patriots won't have to worry about double-teaming Shaun Ellis anymore.

He's on their side, now.

Ellis, who had two sacks in the Jets' playoff win over New England last year, has agreed to a one-year contract with the Pats. He could practice with the team today.

Elsewhere on defense, the Pats released safety Brandon McGowan, according to online reports.

Stars are born at UFC 133

The big-money bouts at Saturday's UFC 133 in Philadelphia featured primarily older fighters.

All four in the main and co-main event were over 30, including Rashad Evans, who stopped Tito Ortiz to earn a light heavyweight title shot.

But the surprisingly solid card also featured coming-out parties for a pair of future stars.

Rory MacDonald, just 22, needed only 3:54 to TKO veteran Mike Pyle. He's being touted as the next Georges St. Pierre.

Swede Alexander Gustafsson, 24, disposed of Matt Hamill just as easily at LHW.

Moving on from Yanks, for a few weeks, at least

The AL East leaders' latest showdown is over ◐ They'll get together again in a few weeks ◐ For now, Boston's series focus turns to Minnesota

The Red Sox and Yankees wrapped up their three-game series at Fenway Park last night a lot like they started it.

Just about dead even atop the AL East.

New York's bullpen carried it to a 3-2 win in Friday's opener, but the Sox struck back Saturday, shelling CC Sabathia in a 10-4 triumph.

They finished the series last night, with Josh Beckett and Freddy Garcia on the mound. The Yanks get a day off today following the late start.

Boston? Not so much.

The Sox are in Minnesota to open a three-game series tonight (7:10 p.m., ESPN, WEEI). They'll get their day off Thursday.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Tim Wakefield is scheduled to start tonight.

New York, meanwhile, hosts the Angels for three starting tomorrow.

The Sox and Yanks will get together twice more in the regular season. They're at Fenway for three starting Aug. 30, then head to the Bronx for a climactic showdown opening on Sept. 23. METRO

The end of Posada?

Yankees DH Jorge Posada was not in the lineup for last night's series finale against the Red Sox.

- The New York stalwart was informed of the move yesterday by manager Joe Girardi.
- "He said he was going to put the best lineup on the field, and he doesn't know when I'm going to DH again," Posada said.
- It could very well be the end of Posada as a contributing member of the Yankees. He went into last night hitting just .230 on the season.

▶ Williams called it "the best win of my life."

Tiger's caddie, not Tiger, a winner

Tiger Woods fired longtime caddie Steve Williams this year.

Yesterday, Woods finished his first tournament in three months. But it was Williams who was a winner, carrying the bag for Adam Scott, who earned a four-shot victory at Firestone. METRO
